LAKE VIEW,
YELWAL ROAD,
MYSORE.

27th June 1918.

My dear Iyengar,

I sent for Mr. Venkatakrishnayya who came at about 5.30 p.m. yesterday, and had a long talk with him. He did not come to see me of his own accord this time -- I do not know why.

Mr. Venkatakrishnayya made many statements to make out - that he was an injured man, that, on account of real or supposed displeasure in high quarters, he was being persecuted, that he was writing in his papers in a spirit of desperation and that, if things continued in the same state, he would leave the Province and go elsewhere to continue his agitation.

After a long conversation, I obtained the accompanying - statement in writing viz., that he would not discuss these questions in a spirit of hostility for about a month, and I think Mr. Reddy will also be amenable to reason and matters can be settled amicably if we go about the business in the right direction.

I have got full notes of the allegations he has made but have not thought fit to reproduce them. They will be available for His Highness' or your perusal whenever required.

Yours Sincerely,
M. Visvesvaraya
